THE POULTRY YARD

Summer Poultry Pointers
This is the season of lice and mites. Get after them—and keep after them.

Yellow skin and yellow legs do not necessarily indicate superior quality, yet they are preferred in most markets and in selecting young stock to be retained as breeders, it often pays to keep this fact in mind.

Give the house plenty of ventilation these hot days and nights. If the fowls insist upon sleeping outdoors on the fence or in the trees it is a plain case that your house is too close and stuffy or else it is so lousy the hens refuse to be pestered therein. Look around and see what's wrong.

Fowls that are two or three months of age cannot be overfed (providing the proper foods are used) until maturity is reached. During this period their assimilative powers are very great and they should be fed comparatively freely. It doesn't pay to starve them.

Now is the time to buy good breeding stock cheap. If you are in the market for stock to improve your flocks, it may save you some money to look around at once.

Plan now to sow a patch of vye near the poultry house this fall. It will make fine forage for the fowls this winter when all other green things are dead.

Lumbers among fowls that are fat and heavy is often caused by the fowls being too high. Better keep them low, movable and all on the same level. Two or three feet from the ground is high enough.

There is no excuse for a dirty, ill-ventilated poultry house. Instead, such a house usually indicates that its owner is business in that class of people who believe "there is no money in home." If a house is kept well bodied with constant air flow, sprinkling occasionally with disinfectant time, and the chickens provided regularly, it will be as healthy in any way.

The poultry can be kept in good health with pure water and wholesome food better than with medicine. It is also cheaper and more pleasant than doctoring ailments.

State are being considered more and more as one of the best balanced diets for fowls.

The poultry of the farm house depends upon the size of the flock.

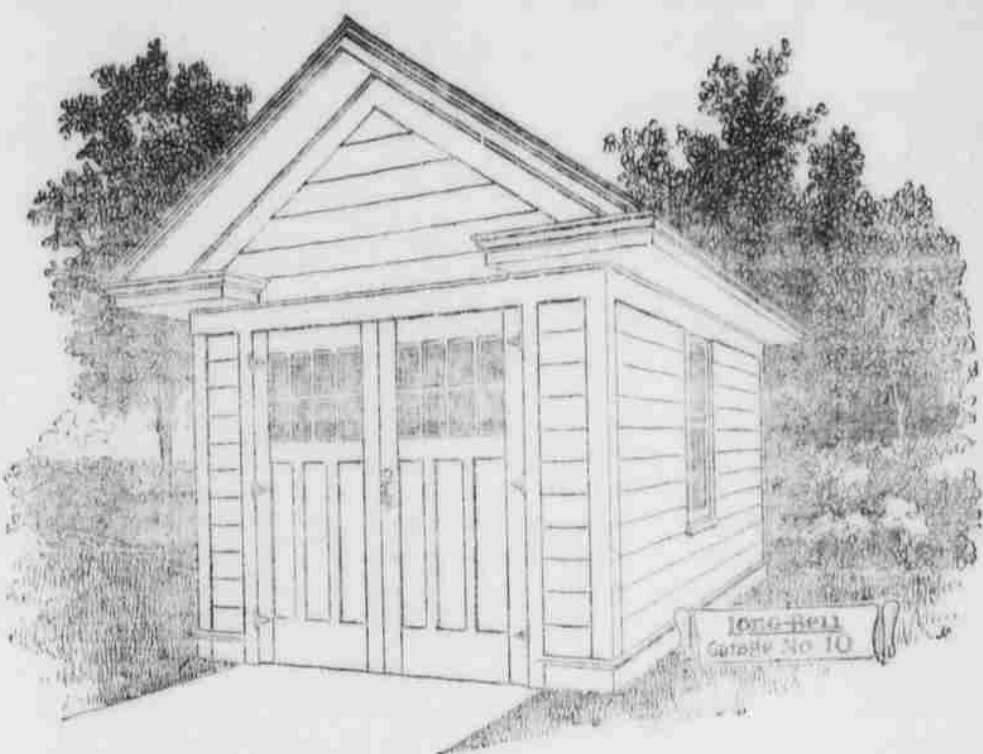

Now is the time to begin to think about putting up a new poultry house. The old run a most likely either too old to be thoroughly satisfactory, or else the flock has grown too large for it.

The exterior of the poultry house is a matter of taste, but internally the comfort and health of the fowls must be the first consideration. Next comes the convenience of the caretaker.

Do not forget to give green food in some form every day. Compel the fowls to exercise; then feed them liberally at night, after an outdoor run.

Any breed of fowls that is carefully and systematically bred for egg production can be made to produce good layers. But the individual specimens must be carefully selected and bred along the right lines.

There is no shade for poultry that equals that furnished by green leaves. No matter whether the leaves grow on trees, weeds or bushes, they make the air around them cooler than any artificial shade. However, if you happen not to have any shade in your poultry yards, by all means provide some. Any kind of frame work covered with boards oiled or canvas will answer the purpose fairly well.

Long-Bell Town Garage

It is 12 x 16 feet on the ground, which gives ample room for ordinary work to be done around the car.

This is a neat, well-lighted, substantial building, an ornament to any property, and can be built for a surprisingly small cost.

A garage of this kind is a sensible investment, always paying dividends by lowering the upkeep of your car, and adding to the value of the property on which it is built.

For plans and estimates on this or other buildings please call at the yard. Our experience is at your service—our stocks of well selected building materials will please you.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigarettey aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.

Don't keep any more hens than necessary during the next few months; they won't lay many eggs anyway, and the young roosters need the room. Hens three or more years old should be disposed of without hesitation, unless of exhibition quality; they seldom lay well after that age. It is also well to remember in this connection that roosters do not lay. There is no profit in keeping a useless bunch of males during the summer and fall months.

Don't be afraid to leave the windows and doors open in the poultry house during the summer time, except perhaps in rainy weather. Fowls soon become debilitated in a close, stuffy house where the atmosphere is rendered almost suffocating by the animal heat of the sleeping fowls. We are letting our growing stock sleep in the open coops this summer and try to keep our breeding houses as near like open sheds as possible, believing that the abundance of pure, fresh air is exceedingly beneficial.

Green food is very important in hot weather; it fills a place on the feed bill that nothing else can. Fowls like to have their crops pretty well filled up once a day, but to do so with grain at this time of year is not wisdom nor economy. Green food is just the thing, as it is not heating or fattening and costs little or nothing.

THE ACID TEST

During a campaign preceding the election of a Missouri Congressman it was suggested that, since he posed as a good business man he might be willing to tell just what a good business man is.

"That's easy," he explained. "A good business man is one who can buy goods from a Scotchman and sell them to a Jew—at a profit!"
